

1% Solution put together by Vinche

Words from the author:

This is the list of concepts, I'm currently working on and in the process of mastering. It's a combination of wisdom acquired from various sources such as books, spiritual teachers, personal observations, friends, lessons from marking events and etc... The list is not complete and is mostly personal since I'm only listing things I'm concerned with at this particular stage of development. Nonetheless it may be of some value to you or inspire you to create one of your own.

The title of this entry is named 1% solution which is derived from a book of the same name which I'm currently reading. It states that the folks we admire are not 100% better. They are just 1% better at 100 things. One of the main idea the book emphasizes on is to focus on effectiveness and efficiency. Effective is doing the right things and efficiency is doing things right.

This list that I have created and the one that you may create on your own must be read daily.

1. It all starts with impact. Your act of creating the list is the impact, your realization that this may be useful or at least insightful and beneficiary.

2. Repetition. You must reread through out the day (or week depending on how fast you want it), the concepts that have impacted you. Like a workout you don't just do one rep or a 2 reps and think you've made a significant improvement. Like your muscles, the brain works on repetition as well. Develop a strong brain, repeat these concepts hourly, daily, weekly. You become what you think about most of the time. Choose to fill your mind with what you want.

3. Utilization. After rereading these concepts and familiarizing yourself with them you will eventually have to put them to use. This won't happen without the constant thinking of these concepts (repetition) and it won't happen without their awareness (the impact). Don't skip steps. To reiterate, 1. Impact 2. Repetition 3. Utilization

4. Internalization. you start to embody these concepts and principles. They are now effortless like knowing exactly what do with a dumbbell if you want to workout a specific muscle. You have a repertoire of knowledge and things come to you naturally.

Lastly,

5. Reinforcement. keep the mind sharp like your body. You still have to occasionally return to the gym to keep your body sharp. Same thing applies to your mind. Many people after reaching a certain level of success forget the basics. Always return to the basics.

These 5 steps to achieving mastery were derived from a mentoring program on how to learn ANYTHING. They work in all fields: Medicine, selling, sports, music, art, hobbies... commit them to memory.

And now the list of principles I have conjured up to read daily, utilize regularly, internalize efficiently and eventually, reinforce when needed.

The purpose of this list is to increase the person's effective capacity, bringing added energy, discernment, vigor, and mental elasticity.

It gives initiative, tenacity of purpose, wisdom of choice, intelligent sympathy, and a thorough enjoyment of life on its higher planes.

"As is a tale, so is life: not how long it is, but how good it is, is what matters. Live your life so that the use of your life will outlive your life."

1. No attachment. Let go of your obsession of all material things and ego. Desire without attachment to the outcome. It is the preoccupation with possessions, more than anything else that prevents us from living freely.

2. Understand the Parkinson's Law. Work expands so as to fill the time available for its completion. Cut the time available. Whether you're a lab manager, a PhD student or a technician, productivity is critical to your success. The Parkinson's Law says that the activities you do expand to fill the time allotted, which can considerably reduce your productivity. For example, if you have to work 8 hours a day at your job, you'll expand your activities to fill that time. However, if you were given only 4 hours per day to do your job, you would "miraculously" find a way to get the same amount of work you could do in 8 hours if not more, in 4 hours. To increase productivity, narrow the time you have allotted to complete your work. Work expands so as to fill the time available for its completion.

3. Strengthen your mind by taking control of your desires. Tame your 5 senses to be always controlled by your mind and not the other way around. In all things, make the flesh obey the spirit.

4. Find opportunities to go the extra mile. Transcend expectations in all that you do. Going above and beyond what everybody expects makes a lasting impression. And it can be attained if you do more than what you're accustomed to doing, so find opportunities to go the extra mile.

5. Law of the Stripper. The highest paid is the one who not only is the most skilled but who appears to enjoy what she's doing. Carry a smile with you, it's magnetic. Change your world with your smile don't let the world change your smile.

6. Absolute Vulnerability. Deliberately move toward your fears... express your affections and let yourself be vulnerable. People are drawn to you when you're vulnerable... real. Be sure to give without expecting anything in return, not even a response. The need for reassurance is an attachment to the ego. Absolute vulnerability means letting go of your attachment to the outcome.

7. Don't die with your music still playing. Deep inside we know exactly what we absolutely love doing and are passionate about. Don't die without fulfilling what you were born and meant to do. Give the world what you have to offer. You have a unique talent, and a unique way of expressing it. There is something that you can do better than anyone else in the world. And for every unique talent and unique expression of that talent, there are also unique needs. Express your talent. Focus on what you are here to give. There's one thing you can do, and one way of doing it that is better than anyone else in the entire planet. And when you are doing that one thing, you lose track of time. Don't die with your music still playing.

8. Keep mind and body pure. Do not entertain ill thoughts, they are destructive. People do not seem to realize that their opinion of the world is also a confession of character. You are what you think. Anything that you think about long enough and hard enough eventually becomes a part of you, exerting its force on your attitude and on your behavior. You are where you are and what you are because of the thought you've allowed to preoccupy your mind. You're in a continual process of becoming, evolving and growing in the direction of your dominant thought, so keep your mind and body pure.

9. Enlarge your thinking.

No one knows enough to be a pessimist. The things we have or are able to do with technology were at one point considered impossible. Flying, sending messages without the use of wires, the light bulb, etc... No one knows enough to be a pessimist. People who made the things we have available were people who thought they could. So Enlarge your thinking.

10. Be Compassionate. Switch the location of your heart to your brain and vice versa. Think with your heart. Whenever you have the option to be right or kind, choose to be kind. Put yourself on the love diet. It's an easy way to remember and practice this immensely valuable quality. Just like in nutrition where you have your carbs, protein, fats and etc... Feed people the emotional food groups. The 3 A's of the love diet. Which are, 1. Attention, 2. Affection, and 3. Appreciation. Always give close and thoughtful attention. Be there in the moment 100%. Show your affection by giving off feelings of fondness or liking. And lastly, express your appreciation by recognizing and enjoying the individual's good qualities and actions. Express your appreciation in words, after all what gets appreciated gets repeated. Remember this love diet.

11. Teach in parables (stories)- instead of pointing out a person's flaw or poor situation share an example of a similar situation and its outcome. It's much more effective and less personal which will keep the other person's ego intact and more readily to accept what you are trying to get across. The great spiritual leaders, Jesus, Buddha, Lao Tsu etc... taught in parables. As Galileo said "you cannot teach a man anything; you can only help him to find it within himself"

12. Achieve the Impossible. Truth is, it's not impossible. It's just an accepted limitation of your capability. Attempt the impossible. The secret of life is to do something you cannot possibly do. Doing the unrealistic is easier than the realistic. 95% of people assume it's impossible to achieve great things so they aim for the mediocre. Therefore, there's less competition doing the unrealistic. It's much more fun anyway.

13. Endure the endurable. Don't quit, know that what you are enduring is strengthening you. Pushing your envelope. The larger your envelope the more you'll be able to perform greater things without the counterproductive feeling of frustration. Your mind will quit a thousand times before your body. Therefore you must strengthen your mind. You must not allow any doubt to enter. Believe it can be done. Whether you think you can or can't, you are right. Endure the endurable.

14. Right effort in the right direction. Doing something unimportant well does not make it important. And requiring a lot of time does not make a task important. 20/80 rule. 20% of your efforts and time account for 80% of your results. Focus on the 20% of your activities or relationships that account for 80% of your satisfaction and growth. The application of this principle will allow you to make significant improvements by focusing on the most effective areas and eliminating, ignoring, automating, delegating or retraining the rest, as appropriate.

15. Law of Cause and Effect. When you act a certain way you get a specific result. If you like the result, keep acting the same way. If not, change the act.

16. Seek ways to accommodate more challenges. Quit the excuses. Time. We all have the same amount of time as Thomas Edison, Mother Theresa, da Vinci, and anyone else you admire. Accommodate more challenges. View them as opportunities. Embrace challenges at first impulse. Also remember, guests don't bring us challenge they bring us opportunities. Repeat after me. I love a challenge... I love a challenge... I love a challenge.

17. The Frater Law of Potential. Look for the good in everything. There's always at least something you can perceive as good. Draw it out. Accentuate it. Praise it, develop it, bring it to the forefront of your sight and mind. It's not what you look at that matters, it is what you see. When you start to change the way you look at things the things you look at change. Another thing to do is, teach people something about themselves. Remind them of their geniuses.

18. Strengthen, and cultivate your assets. There are things that you're naturally good at or better than the average. Do more of it. Capitalize on your assets. Learn to strengthen your strengths. Working on yourself is by no means selfish. As far as were un-perfect human beings, were non-perfect servants to the world. You perfect yourself so you can serve better. The more perfect we are the better we can serve the whole. A rose that is beautiful makes the garden beautiful, the same is also true for human beings. When one thing evolves, everything around that thing evolves as well. Strengthen and cultivate your assets.

19. KNOW that it can be done. If you can conceive it, you can achieve it. The work is half done once you have seen it in your mind. Be clear and continuously focus on what you want. You'd be surprised at how many actionable steps you can take when you've reached a high level of clarity. Have faith that whatever you envision, the thing is already yours. And that it is at hand and you only have to take possession of it. Be grateful for your imagination. There is the great mental world in which we live and move and have our being; this world is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent; it will respond to our desire in direct ratio to our purpose and faith. Our faith must be creative or constructive; and our faith must be strong enough to generate sufficient strength to bring our purpose into manifestation.

20. Find better ways of doing things. Search for ways to develop your awareness of a better way. Figure out what is that you desire. What it is that you want. Look for problems and come up with solutions. There are always better ways of doing things. Don't be complacent and comfortable. I ask myself "how can I do this better?" "How can this be improved?" One of our main duty in life is to evolve. Secondly, anyone who lives within their means suffer from a lack of imagination. Reevaluate your assumptions. Be open to the possibility that you could be wrong, and be willing to do something completely different.

21. Encourage others to talk. How can you possibly learn anything if you're doing all the talking. Be attentive, concentrate on what the other person is saying and evaluate. Being a good conversationalist isn't about by how good you talk. It's about how good you listen. To listen well is as powerful a means of communication as to talk well. Become an expert in listening and encourage others to talk.

22. Action cures fear. Lack of action fertilizes fear and makes it grow. When in fear, ask yourself what kind of action can you take to conquer you fear. Conquering fear is defining fear. Describe the worst that could happen. Your worst case scenario. Usually what we most fear doing is what we should be doing. The person who is not everyday conquering some fear has not learned the secret of life. Define the absolute worse if you did what you're thinking of doing. What steps would you take to repair... what are the benefits? (start living dale carnegie)

23. Dig deeper into anything to get enthusiastic. The more questions you seek and ask the more enthusiastic you'll become about the subject.
24. View your work or whatever it is you're doing as important. Three bricklayers were asked what they were doing: The first man answered, "I'm laying bricks." The second man replied, "I'm building this wall." But the third man could see more than the bricks or the wall. He declared, "I'm building a cathedral." Be that third man, see your work as important. Add meaning to your work. Hard work is a prison sentence only if it doesn't have meaning.
25. Add value to people's lives. Always give something, it doesn't have to be in a form of a material thing. It could be a flower, a compliment, or a prayer. In fact the most powerful form of giving are nonmaterial. The gift of caring, attention, affection, appreciation and love are some of the most precious gifts you can give and, they don't cost you anything. Each time you meet someone you can silently wish them: joy, happiness and laughter. Wherever you go and whoever you encounter you should bear a gift for them. Today I shall give something to everyone I come in contact with. This is my wish for you: Comfort on difficult days, smiles when sadness intrudes, rainbows to follow the clouds, laughter to kiss your lips, sunsets to warm your heart, hugs when spirits sag, beauty for your eyes to see, friendships to brighten your being, faith so that you can believe, confidence for when you doubt, courage to know yourself, patience to accept the truth, Love to complete your life.
26. Fall in love with what you do and what you sell is not product, it's love. You transcend yourself as someone giving away bliss.
The orange when you squeeze the orange what comes out is orange juice because that's what's inside. It doesn't matter what time of the day you squeeze it. It doesn't matter what instrument you use it doesn't matter what the circumstances are. When you squeeze an orange what you get is what's inside. Same metaphor expands to you. When someone squeezes you and out of you comes anger frustration bitterness or non-bliss. It really isn't because of who did the squeezing as much as we'd like to convince ourselves that's what is causing us to have non bliss. It's because that's what's inside.
28. Embrace, anticipate change and learn new skills. Nothing stays the same. You have to adapt your systems as things unfolds. The earliest the better. Learning assists us in adapting to change. It opens new doors for us. It breaks up the routine and introduces us to the new and refreshing. It enables us to put our lives in perspective. Take a trip to the library and explore the shelves, especially those you would not ordinarily visit. See what interesting pieces of information you can pick up. Something might perk your interest. Growth follows knowledge; action follows inspiration; opportunity follows perception.
29. Meditate twice a day for at least 10 minutes each. Sit quietly in a room, clear your mind and allow no thoughts to enter your mind for the entire meditation period. After extensive meditation training, minimal effort will be necessary to sustain attentional focus. This will allow you to perform any task effortlessly. You'll be able to clear your mind as you wish and be in the complete moment. You will experience the law of pure potentiality.
30. Be like a mirror. The perfect man employs his mind as a mirror. it grasps nothing, it refuses nothing. It receives but does not keep. And when anything comes in front of the mirror, it reflects it instantly, the mirror doesn't wait to reflect it.
31. Take a moment out of your day in solitude, preferably surrounded by nature. Solitude is the development of self. When a person spends time in solitude from others, he may experience changes to his self-concept. This can also help a person to form or discover his identity without any outside distractions. Solitude also provides time for contemplation, growth in personal spirituality, and self-examination. The constraints of others will not have any effect on a person who is spending time in solitude, therefore giving the person more of a scope to his actions. A person's experiences are shaped by the people he interacts with. With increased solitude, a person's choices are less likely to be affected by exchanges with others. Side note: In order to fully access information
- on any subject, topic or time period one needs uninterrupted concentration for extremely long periods of time. Unfortunately, or fortunately, one must be in complete isolation, in order to complete.
32. Acquire new tools. If the only tool you have in your tool box is a hammer, everything starts to look like a nail. What we often see in the world of health and other areas of life, everybody has their hammer. The medical doctor it may be a prescription pad, for a chiropractor it's a spinal adjustment for homeopaths it's a mystic kinture, for hypnotherapist its the induction of a chant, for an acupuncturist it may acupuncture needles, for a personal trainer it may be resistance training and so on. True health, true potential is choosing the right tools for the right concern and not trying to impose one particular structure on everybody's issues. Acquire new tools so that you can perhaps choose a subtler intervention when its appropriate without relinquishing the more powerful tools that may be appropriate in other circumstances. Break down the barriers between disciplines, utilize everything in your environment outer and inner to establish increasing levels of balance and integration in our live.

33. Step into the unknown and you will step into the field of all possibilities. In your willingness to step into the unknown you will have the wisdom of uncertainty factored in. This means that in every moment of your life you will have excitement adventure, mystery. You will experience the fun of life and have a zest for living. Everyday you can look for the excitement of what may occur in that field of possibilities. When you experience uncertainty, you're on the right path.

34. Discover your divinity. Seek your higher self that is beyond your ego. Realize that at your core, you are a spiritual being living in a physical body. In lower stages of consciousness, this concept may seem difficult to grasp but we are spiritual beings that have taken manifestation in physical form. We are spiritual beings that have occasional human experiences. Each of us are here discover our higher self. Who you really are can only be discovered through deeper questioning, direct exploration and through a more subtle experiencing of that which is beyond all ideas about yourself. It can be discovered when the mind is quiet and no longer telling you who you are. When all ideas about yourself have been stilled, then what remains is who you really are - Consciousness, Awareness, Stillness, Presence, Peace, Love, the Divine. You are that which is nameless and yet has been given a thousand names.

35. Service to humanity. Serve your fellow human beings. How are you best suited to serve humanity. With every person you come in contact with, always ask yourself: How can I help? Serve others and all your needs will be served.

37. Give that which you seek. If you seek affluence, give it. If you seek money, give money. If you seek love, appreciation and affection, then learn to give love, appreciation and affection.

38. Today I shall judge nothing that occur... Today I shall judge nothing that occur... Today I shall judge nothing that occur... Remind yourself of that prayer each time you catch yourself judging. Learning to not judge things is one of the great paths to inner peace.

39. Connect with nature daily. Sit by a stream, a lake, a forrest, a mountain or seashore. Connect with nature intelligence. You will spontaneously receive creative thought because it is also the field of infinite creativity and pure knowledge.

40. Master the 4 ingredients to the ultimate self discipline. 1. Self-Control – The act of controlling your emotions, actions, thoughts, words, and personal direction. 2. Motivation – The “fire inside”, that fuels our efforts and makes accomplishments worth achieving. 3. Persistence – The ability to continue through adversity. The ability to brush off failure and stay focused on our goals. 4. Goals and desires – Those tangible achievements that breed motivation. The first step to developing self-discipline is to set a specific goal, desire or objective. Without a specific desire to accomplish or attain, there is no need for self-discipline.

All four of these ingredients must be present in our lives to achieve self-discipline. In order to ensure our success at every endeavor, we must first understand how to strengthen and enhance each of the four key-ingredients needed for self-discipline.

Self Discipline is the ability to make yourself do what you should do, when you should do it, whether you feel like it or not. The critical part is "feel like it or not" Anybody can do it if they feel like it, if it feels good, if it's fun and enjoyable. It's when you don't feel like doing it, when it's hard, when you are tired and worn out and you do it anyway because it's the right thing to do that you demonstrate character. One the great aims of life is to develop character. To become a fine human being in the course of your personal evolution. The hallmark of great character is self discipline. Master the 4 ingredients to the ultimate self discipline. Self control, Motivation, Persistence, Goals and Desires.

41. Consciously and deliberately love at least 51% of your awaken day. That is the tipping point to living a blissful life. Love is seeing things from a positive view point. View at least 51% of your day from a positive view point. When your actions are motivated by love there is no wasted energy, your energy multiplies and accumulates. In the higher field love is the only motivator. Let love be your reason. Let love be your drive. Let love illuminate the unique and miraculous richness in every unfolding moment. Include the love factor in all that you do and everything will be effortless.

42. Acceptance. Today accept people, situations, circumstances and events as they occur. Know that this moment is as it should be. Do not struggle against the whole universe by struggling against this moment. In your world there are no coincidence. Your acceptance should be total and complete. Accept things as they are this moment. Now take responsibility for your situation and for all these events you see as problems. Taking responsibility means not blaming anyone or anything for your situation, including yourself. This is an opportunity for you to grow. Every problem is an opportunity in disguise and this alertness to opportunities allows you to take this moment and transform it into an equal or greater benefit. Eliminate, therefore, any possible tendency to complain of conditions as they have been, or as they are, because it rests with you to change them and make them what you would like them to be. Direct your effort to a realization of the mental resources, always at your command, from which all real and lasting power comes. Persist in this practice until you come to a realization of the fact that there can be no failure in the accomplishment of any condition in life if you but understand your power and persist in your idea, because the mind-forces are ever ready to lend themselves to a purposeful will, in the effort to crystalize your thoughts and desire into actions, events, and conditions.

43. Relinquish the need to defend your point of view. Feel no need to persuade or convince others of your point of view. Remain open to all points of view and do not become rigidly attached to anyone of them. Be flexible at the arrival of new ideas. Constant development is the law of life, and a man who always tries to maintain his dogmas in order to appear consistent drives himself into a false position.

44. Develop your Inner Strength. When we are weak, situation is a problem. When we are balanced, situation is a challenge. When we are strong, situation is an opportunity.

What makes a situation appear as problem or an opportunity depends on our inner strength. The difference is internal not external. A weak person is attached to how, what and when... conditions. A strong person is free of how, what and when. Unconditional.

45. Forecast Thinking. Anticipate, over-prepare, and go with the flow. Make all the decisions in advance before the occasions come. Think through every manageable scenarios before they arise, and run drills to figure out exactly what you would do in each situation. Excellence is never an accident. It is the ability to see and be in the position to handle obstacles before they arise, with skillful execution and intelligent direction.

46. Be impeccable with your words. Your words have the ability to create... and destroy. Your goal should be to build up, not destroy. Say what you mean, mean what you say, with love and respect. Always be impeccable with your words. Make your words meaningful. And remember, never talk too little or too much.

47. Self Efficacy. Your eyes show the strength of your soul. Say what you do know instead of what you don't. Have the comprehending look in your eyes, the decisiveness in your tone of voice, the spontaneity, freedom, and thoroughness in your gestures and movement.

49. Cultivate care. Enter the world of another and feel what they feel. People don't care how much you know until they know how much you care.

50. Be passionate about life! Seize the day. Get enthusiastic, envision wild success. What does it look like? Feel like? Smell like? Sound like? Get passionate. Capture the features and details of what you envision, and make them a reality. You make the unfamiliar to familiar with the art of visualization. Visualize the future in positive light and your appetite for life will grow. Visualization is the process of making mental images, and the image is the mold or model which will serve as a pattern from which your future will emerge. Make the pattern clear and make it beautiful; do not be afraid; make it grand; remember that no limitation can be placed upon you by any one but yourself; you are not limited as to cost or material; draw on the Infinite for your supply, construct it in your imagination; it will have to be there before it will ever appear anywhere else. Make the image clear and clean-cut, hold it firmly in the mind and you will gradually and constantly bring the thing nearer to you. You can be what "you will to be."

Work is necessary - labor, hard mental labor, the kind of effort which so few are willing to put forth. See the end before a single step is taken; so you are to picture in your mind what you want; you are sowing the seed, but before sowing any seed you want to know what the harvest is to be. This is Idealization. If you are not sure, return to the chair daily until the picture becomes plain; it will gradually unfold; first the general plan will be dim, but it will take shape, the outline will take form, then the details, and you will gradually develop the power by which you will be enabled to formulate plans which will eventually materialize in the objective world. You will come to know what the future holds for you. You must see the picture more and more complete, see the detail, and, as the details begin to unfold the ways and means for bringing it into manifestation will develop. One thing will lead to another. Thought will lead to action, action will develop methods, methods will develop friends, and friends will bring about circumstances, and, finally, the third step, or Materialization, will have been accomplished.

Nikola Tesla, one of the greatest inventors of all ages, the man who has brought forth the most amazing realities, always visualizes his inventions before attempting to work them out. He did not rush to embody them in form and then spend his time in correcting defects. Having first built up the idea in his imagination, he held it there as a mental picture, to be reconstructed and improved by his thought. "In this way," he writes in the Electrical Experimenter. "I am enabled to rapidly develop and perfect a conception without touching anything. When I have gone so far as to embody in the invention every possible improvement I can think of, and see no fault anywhere, I put into concrete, the product of my brain. Invariably my devise works as I conceived it should; in twenty years there has not been a single exception."

51. Develop a great financial offense and strong financial defense. Your financial offense is in finding ways of creating multiple streams of income. Your financial defense is in mastering the art of budgeting and planning. Money is a resource that should never be squandered. Allocate time, energy and money efficiently in ways conducive to building wealth. You wouldn't expect billionaires to be budgeting but billionaire became billionaires by budgeting and controlling expenses. And they maintain their affluence status the same exact way. Have you ever noticed the people you see jogging day after day? They are the ones who seem not to need to jog, but that's why they are fit. Those who are wealthy, work at staying financially fit. Those who are not financially fit, do little to change their status. Most people want to be physically fit and the majority know what is required to achieve this but despite that knowledge most people never become well conditioned physically. Why not? because they just don't have the discipline to just do it. Financial independence is more important than displaying high social status.

52. Communicate clearly. Stop. Think. Talk. Listen. Share information, thoughts and feelings in a manner that the message received is understood in the way it was intended. Your message should be clear, concise, complete and courteous. Why must your message be concise. The more elaborate our means of communication, the less we communicate. While most people would differ on this one, the fact remains that the more elaborate our means of communication, the less we actually communicate. Stretch the communication process longer, you will instantly observe that the point of the messages will take a nosedive. Why communicate completely? Communicating completely means leaving your preconceptions at the door. The receiving party should have everything they need to be informed and, if applicable, take action. Lastly, communicating courteously. Communicating courteously means bypassing the receiver's emotional bias by taking in consideration their feelings. It means being empathetic to their needs. If you talk to someone in a language he understands, it'll go to his head. If you talk to him in his language, it'll go to his heart. One of the biggest problem in communication is the illusion that it has taken place. Communicate clearly, concisely, completely and always, courteously.

53. Practice brilliance with these 10 steps. 1. When you first meet someone, introduce yourself with a smile and offer a handshake. 2. Make an effort to remember and use peoples' names. It's good to call people by name whenever possible. It makes a good, lasting impression, and it makes the other person feel important and special. After the person tells you his or her name, immediately use it several times in the conversation. For practice, try using the person's name at the end of every 3 sentences. 3. smile at appropriate times while conversing, especially when greeting. 4. Make eye contact while conversing. Eye contact should include frequent breaks. Glance down to the side, then quickly make eye contact again. Glancing down to the side is important. If you instead glance to the side (as if looking out the window, for example) or look up, it gives the person the impression you're distracted and not paying attention. 5. To end a conversation, wrap up with a closing statement. Bring the conversation to an end by making a polite closing comment or gesture. Have a list of good closing (wrap-up) comments handy. Example: "I've enjoyed talking with you (insert the name of the person)." 6. While listening, listen for meaning and ask questions. Keep mentally busy searching for meaning in the message, and ask questions. This mental "search for meaning" helps keep you focused, attentive, and engaged. 7. When discussing a topic, tend to talk about and focus on positive (good) aspects. Focusing on the positive (good) aspects draws people's attention in a favorable way, and people enjoy the conversation more. People are generally more attracted to a person who has a "positive outlook on life." And when it comes to work evaluations, positive-minded people generally do better. 8. When you have a negative opinion or comment, lead in with a positive comment first. It's best to say something positive first, then express a negative opinion or comment in a tactful way. 9. When you receive unfavorable feedback, note where you need to improve and thank the person. 10. When you give a person negative feedback, talk with the person alone in a private place. Praise in public, criticize in private.

54. Write about creative and innovative ideas. Use your creative and analytical intellect. Think a lot about your topic, do a lot of research and write a lot.

55. Pick your labels and discard the ones that you do not want. Labels have a tendency to make people act accordingly. Do not accept the roles society foist on you. Recreate yourself by choosing your own labels. Be the master of your own image rather than letting others define it for you.

56. Study facts and statistics.

57. Act as if. Employ a whatever it takes attitude. Affirm that everything you need is here now. Do what you can, with what you have, where you are, right now. It's easier to act yourself into a new way of thinking than it is to think yourself into a new way of acting. Act as if. Or fake it until you make it.

58. Attain and maintain good health. Be fit and full of energy. Health challenges can demand your immediate and constant attention. When you are not fit and full of energy, the lack of stamina and feelings of tiredness will consume your mind. Do not let that happen. Your mind is your greatest asset and the source of all your creation and productivity. Do not over eat, drink plenty of water, take frequent breaks and walk around. Exercise boosts overall performance.

59. Learn to master your emotions.

Emotions cloud reason. And if you cannot see the situation clearly you cannot prepare for or respond to with any degree of control.

60. Attract the best. Think and see yourself as a magnet. Be magnetic to the things you want. Attract only that which you like by surrounding yourself with props, images, people, things and thoughts of the things you want. Repel the things you do not want by not letting, images, people, things and thoughts of what you do not want, enter your surroundings or worse your mind. You are what you attract, so attract the best. Don't settle, don't compromise, and don't be deceived by appearances. Do not date or employ potential. Select the best. Chose mediocrity and you'll have a mediocre life.

61. When writing, instructing or giving presentations, follow Aristotle's 3 simple steps for maximum efficiency. First, Tell them what you are going to tell them, second, tell them, and third, tell them what you've told them. How it works, step one: a preview of life's upcoming attraction. Tell them what they are about to witness. Step two: now that you've perked their interest, live up to it and deliver the goods. And lastly, step three: leave the audience with a feeling of admiration and respect. Throwback the highlights.

62. The Emory Law. Track your individual growth and use benchmarks set either by yourself or the best in the industry to compare your performance. Dimensions typically measured are quality, time and cost. This technique will help you identify specific problem areas and eliminate guesswork. It will also help prioritize improvement opportunities. It should make it easier to increase performance expectations. And perhaps more importantly it will challenge you to work smart instead of simply working hard.

64. Drown yourself in a sea of knowledge and existence. You are the books you read, the films you watch, the music you listen to, the people you meet, the dreams you have, the conversation you engage in. You are what you take from these. You are a collective of every experience you have had in your life. You are every single second of every single day so drown yourself in a sea of knowledge and existence. Let the words run through your veins and let the colors fill your mind. Read, watch and experience things that stimulates your thinking, challenges your belief system and inspire you to right action.

65. Create your own reality. Reality is negotiable. Use your power of persuasion and initiative to get what you want. There's nothing wrong with using persuasion to have things workout in your favor as long as you are not causing harm to anyone in the process. Don't sit and wait either for some miracle to happen. Take the initiative. Miracles happen when you move forward not when you stand still. Develop practical intelligence. Know WHAT to say to whom, WHEN to say it and lastly, HOW to say it for maximal effect.

66. Intentionally place yourself in new territories. In mind, in location, in activities, and company. Don't just think outside the box. Be outside the box. Lay on the floor, sit underneath a tree. Eat with your non-dominant hand. Hang out with a different crowd. When you start seeing the world from a different angle you'll begin to think from a different angle. It's like traveling, once you've seen what's out there, your thinking will expand to accomodate what you've seen and experienced.

67. Ask questions, don't assume everyone sees life the way you do, think the way you do. Have the courage to ask questions.

68. When people upset you have to keep in mind to always be looking for solutions. You shouldn't be looking to be right, not looking to win. Understand that the person is behaving the only way they know how to behave right now, that's all they know. You then must respond with who you are. Which is love, kindness, acceptance.

69. Do not be concerned with your reputation. What other people think of you is none of your business. One's reputation is located in other people. We have no control over it. Be concerned with your character. That you are in charge of. You can never be in charge of how people are going to perceive you because that is their opinion. And they are all entitled to it. One person may think you're great another may think you're horrible. Do not be concerned with your reputation. Being concerned with your reputation means living to someone else's expectation of how you ought to be.

70. Be and look like the type of person you want to meet. Are you friendly, honest, courteous, spiritual, thoughtful, funny, reliable, unassuming, optimistic, kind, respectful, faithful, passionate, fit? Be and look like the type of person you want to meet.

71. Break the pattern of the past. Develop your ability to distance yourself from the present moment. Think objectively about the past and future. One face continuously looking into the future and the other to the past. Nothing should catch you by surprise because you are constantly imagining problems before they arise. Extend your time perspective- 15, 30, 50 years from now. Calculate every possible permutations and pitfalls that might emerge from it. The further you see the more step ahead you plan, the more powerful you become.

The other face looks constantly in the past. Not to remember past hurt or past grudges that would only curb your power. Half of the game is to learn to forget each event in the past that eat away at you. That cloud your reason. The reason of the face looking in the past is to educate yourself constantly. You look at the past to learn from those who came before you. Historical figures, your own actions and those of your friends. Those are the most vital schools you can learn from because it comes from personal experience. You begin by examining the mistakes you've made in the past, the ones that have most grievously held you back. You analyze them and you extract from them a lesson and oath "I shall never repeat such a mistake" "I shall never fall into such a trap again". If you can learn to evaluate yourself in this way, you can learn to break the pattern of the past. Immensely valuable skill. You can never make the same mistake twice because the 2nd time you make it, it's not a mistake, it's a choice

72. Suit up. Do whatever is in your power to improve your situation. You are only a victim if you allow yourself to be; if you are reactive rather than proactive. Being reactive is acting in response to a situation rather than creating or controlling it. Proactive means taking control and making things happen rather than simply adjusting to a situation or waiting for something to happen. It does not mean being pushy, obnoxious, or aggressive. It means recognizing our responsibility, and more importantly or ability to make things happen. This world is just a play and you are the director, producer, the actor and the doer so suit up.

73. Never get discouraged. Most of our assumed downfalls are due to lack of experience not lack of ability. Everything you do today; can and will be done better, faster, and smarter the next time ahead. So never, ever, ever, get discouraged. Promise me you'll always remember: You're braver than you believe, and stronger than you seem, and smarter than you think.

74. Do what you have set yourself to do. Unless you do this, you had better not start at all, because modern psychology tells us that when we start something and do not complete it, or make a resolution and do not keep it, we are forming the habit of failure; absolute, disgraceful failure. If you do not intend to do a thing, do not start; if you do start, see it through even if the heavens fall; if you make up your mind to do something, do it; let nothing, no one, interfere with what you have determined, the thing is settled; the die is cast, there is no longer any argument. If you carry out this idea, beginning with small things which you know you can control and gradually increase the effort, but never under any circumstances allowing you to be overruled, you will find that you can eventually control yourself, and many men and women have found to their sorrow that it is easier to control an empire than to control themselves. But when you have learned to control yourself you will have found the "World Within" which controls the world without; you will have become irresistible; men and things will respond to your every wish without any apparent effort on your part. Do what you have set yourself to do and let nothing, no one, interfere with what you have determined. Learn to recognize and fight the interruption impulse. This is infinitely easier when you have a set of rules, responses and routines to follow. It is your job to prevent yourself and others from the letting of the unnecessary and unimportant prevent the start and finish accomplishment of the important.

75. Do things a little differently, not to please the world. But to please oneself. It's not possible to be bored while you are doing something a bit differently. To be bored is to be doing something with a tint of sameness. It's repetitious because you've done it before. To be doing things a bit differently is to cause something new to come into existence. It's exciting. It's to be inventive.

76. All doubt and timidity should be banished. You shouldn't be up one minute, down the next. Lose that habit. If you have a goal, you should trust yourself in the effectiveness of whatever you undertake no matter how slow, or how many set backs you face. Adjust and set course again. Ten thousand failures should not be able to budge your resolution or put a dent in your self image. All doubt and timidity should be banished.

77. Don't voice any of your criticism or judgement until you've obtained all the facts opposing and supporting your conclusion. Inquire and ask. Act like a detective trying to solve a delicate case. Get a reliable ground to form your judgment. There's always two sides of the story. Don't voice your conclusion until you've gotten both sides. And if you must voice your opinion, disclose that this is based on the information you currently have and not the absolute truth. Always practice right speech.

78. Do not get caught up in praises or criticisms. Let them pass as mere sounds and echoes. Do not get leashed to either one of them. Treat both impostors just the same.

79. Be the rider, not the horse. Your mind is like a horse. You are not the mind, but the power controlling the mind. By being able to still the mind, and direct the mind to whatever you want, you prove to yourself that the mind is a tool or medium of transportation, and that it is not you. Remember the phrase "You can achieve anything if you set your mind to it." Our mind needs direction in order for it to work for us. If we do not take control and provide this direction, it will merely drawn in on the directions given to it by external stimuli.

80. Your body is an outward manifestation of what you think about, what you eat, what you choose to do and not frequently do. You can largely control what your body looks like by sorting through thoughts that are in harmony with what you want, exercising appropriately, and selecting the food that contribute to how you'd like to look. Nature holds the gun, nurture pulls the trigger. Do not blame it all on genetics.

81. Train and develop your consciousness. The mind can directly influence physical matter because everything in existence has a degree of consciousness. Scientific experiments have shown that subatomic particles can be changed by the thoughts of those who are observing the experiment. If a subatomic particle of matter can be influenced by the uncontrolled consciousness of an onlooker, it follows that larger material forms can be influenced by someone with a well trained, better developed and highly controlled consciousness. To achieve this you must break down your automated behavioral patterns and reactions. These automated responses give rise to all sorts of feelings about yourself and others. Learning to disregard these automatic emotional reactions and behaviors is an important aspect of development. If you don't disregard them and end up giving them attention, you inadvertently reinforce them. Ridding yourself of old patterns of behaviour is a pre-requisite for acquiring higher levels of consciousness. We are not free unless we learn how to control our attention so that it doesn't wander aimlessly and reinforce every thought or feeling that passes through.

Our sub-conscious continually feeds our waking conscious with thoughts, feelings and impulses that our waking consciousness assumes are its own. In turn, our waking consciousness continually feeds our sub-conscious with bad habits, illusions and fictions. So negative thoughts and fictitious concepts are continually recycled between our conscious and sub-conscious minds, which reinforces our weaknesses. This vicious cycle can be only broken through persistent awareness of our thoughts and feelings to ensure that we only give attention to (and reinforce) positive influences and quickly discard the negative ones. Eventually the negative stimuli will grow so weak that they are unable to send impulses up into the waking consciousness.

82. Keep your conscious mind on duty every waking hour. Your conscious mind is the watchman at the gate of your subconscious. It has the faculty of discrimination, carrying with it the responsibility of choice. It has the power of reasoning-whether inductive, deductive, analytical or syllogistic. It is the seat of your will. Conditions of fear, worry, poverty, disease, disharmony dominate us by reason of false suggestions by the unguarded subconscious. A trained conscious mind can entirely prevent all this by its vigilant protective action.

The subconscious mind draws just and accurate inferences from premises furnished from outside sources. Where the premises is true, the subconscious reaches a faultless conclusion, but, where the premise or suggestion is an error, the whole structure falls. The subconscious does not engage in the process of proving. It relies on the conscious mind, the watchman at the gate to guard it from mistaken impressions.

The subconscious receives any suggestions as true and instantly proceeds to act upon it. The conscious mind can suggest either truth or error. If the latter, it is at the cost of wide reaching peril to the whole being.

The conscious mind ought to be on duty during every waking hour. When the watchman is off guard or when its calm judgement is suspended, under a variety of circumstances, then the subconscious is unguarded and left open to suggestion from all sources. During the wild excitement of panic, or during the height of anger, or the impulse of the irresponsible crowd or at any other time of unrestrained passion, the conditions are most dangerous. The subconscious is then open to the suggestion of fear, hatred, selfishness, greed, self depreciation and other negative forces, derived from surrounding persons or circumstances. The result is usually unwholesome in the extreme, with the effects that may endure to distress it for a long time. Hence the great importance of guarding the subconscious mind from false impressions.

We cannot express powers that we do not possess. The only way by which we may secure possession of power is to become conscious of power, and we can never be conscious of power until we learn that all power is from within.

The world without is a reflection of the world within. What appears in the world without is what has been found within. In the world within you can find infinite Wisdom, infinite Power, infinite Supply of all that is necessary, waiting for unfoldment, development and expression. If we recognize these potentialities in the world within they will take form in the world without. All gain is the result of an accumulated consciousness. All loss is the result of a scattered consciousness.

83. Ease and perfection depend entirely upon the degree in which we cease to depend on the consciousness. The subconscious is the seat of habit. What we do over and over becomes mechanical and no longer an act of judgement. This is favorable for us if the habit is wholesome and right. If it is harmful, and wrong, the remedy is to use a strong counter suggestion, frequently repeated, which the mind will accept, and as a result eventually form new habits. The key point here is frequently repeated. The counter suggestion for example, the act of smiling more often must be frequently repeated until it becomes mechanical and no longer an act of judgment. Ease and perfection depend entirely upon the degree in which we cease to depend on the consciousness.

84. Paint your tomorrows. Discipline yourself to plan your day thoroughly. It'll double your productivity. Best time to do this is the night before. If you want to make the most of your mornings, you can't just expect to jump out of bed without a plan and somehow have all of the pieces fall into place for a very productive day. No, a productive day is usually the result of planning and preparation. And it begins the night before. First, focus on changing your bed time routine. Create your top 5 evening must do's, for example: 1. All your meals made for the next day. That is, breakfast, lunch, snacks and if you're feeling ambitious, dinner. 2. Clean up the kitchen. 3. Clothes laid out for the morning. 4. Everything together and set by the door that you need for tomorrow. 5. Before going to sleep, write out tomorrow's goals and objectives. Remember, without goals, we lack direction. Take care of the future because that is where you're going to spend the rest of your life. You can enjoy the moment but this moment is made possible because of the seeds you planted yesterday.

85. Set your Interruption killing policies. Batch activities. Ask yourself, what can I routinized by batching? What tasks, whether laundry, groceries, payments, emails, can you allot to a specific time each day, or week, or month, or year so that you don't squander time repeating them more often than is absolutely necessary. Once you've set your interruption killing policies review your results from time to time and amend changes where you see fit. The goal is to eliminate time wasters. Set your Interruption killing policies

86. Achieve. Prepare to do your most important task before 11 AM. Before life gets in the way. Achievement is talent plus preparation.

87. Practice the art of nonfinishing. Starting something doesn't automatically justify finishing it. If you are reading an article that sucks put it down don't pick it back up. If you're watching a movie and it sucks don't finish it before any more neurons die. If you're full after eating half your meal put the fork down and save the rest. More is not better, and stopping something is often 10 times better than finishing it. Develop the habit of non-finishing that which is boring or nonproductive if the overhead authority isn't demanding it. It's like the saying, "If you find yourself in a hole, stop digging".

88. The Eli Karlin Law. Make as many mistakes as possible and talk to as many people as possible. Learn from your mistakes so you don't make or repeat them on much more important matters later on. Make many mistakes and experience as much as you can.

89. Be perfect. The True Gentleman is the man whose conduct proceeds from good will and an acute sense of propriety, and whose self-control is equal to all emergencies; who does not make the poor man conscious of his poverty, the obscure man of his obscurity, or any man of his inferiority or deformity; who is himself humbled if necessity compels him to humble another; who does not flatter wealth, cringe before power, or boast of his own possessions or achievements; who speaks with frankness but always with sincerity and sympathy; whose deed follows his word; who thinks of the rights and feelings of others, rather than his own; and who appears well in any company, a man with whom honor is sacred and virtue safe.

90. Be grateful for everything. All things have contributed to your advancement, therefore you should include all things into your gratitude. Acknowledge everything that you receive and experience. Learn to live your life as if everything were a miracle, and be aware on a continuous basis of how much you've been given.

91. Develop an attractive lifestyle. What impression do you make on others. Polish and make it radiate what you want. What do you convey with the first impression? is it confidence? assuredness? success? What do you sub-communicate with your body language and vocal tonality. Do you feel you really know what you want in your life. The key to experiencing success in life is to be able to engage in healthy relationship with other people. Men and women. Every kind of relationship you can conceive of, the business relationship, the romantic relationship, friendship, every person you relate to on a regular basis. Relationships magnify the human experience. The essential skill is the ability to understand how to relate to all people in a positive way.

92. Value and take care of your money. Money is something that can be used as a medium of exchange. A person values money, not because it is intrinsically useful, but because it can be useful in exchange. This also means take care of your possessions so that you do not squander money repairing or replacing them. An ounce of prevention is always worth a pound of cure. And the price of discipline is always less than the pain of regret. This does not mean living below your means or being a scrooge with your money. It means knowing where your money is going, investing in the things that will enhance your purpose, increase your productivity, or accumulate more wealth. You may also spend money on things that make you feel good or things you simply want but do not expect much more out of them. True happiness comes from within, not without.

93. Understand Murphy's Laws. Murphy's first law. If anything can possibly go wrong, it will. Out of all the things that could possibly go wrong the one thing that will go wrong will be the worst thing and at the worst possible time. Murphy's 2nd law. No matter how much time you plan, everything takes longer than you expect. Murphy's 3rd law. Everything always ends up costing you much more than you calculated. Murphy's 4th law. Nothing is ever done right the first time. Hope for the best, but always plan for the worst.

94. If you can't explain it simply you do not understand it well enough. Love what you do. You cannot defend what you do not know. And you cannot know what you do not love. Love what you do. The simplest things to explain are things you love.

95. R O R, Return on Relationships. Admit temporary defeat and ask for help. It makes no sense spending energy in going through something alone if it can be made easier with someone else's assistance

96. Focus. The power of attention can be more readily understood by comparing it with a magnifying glass in which the rays of sunlight are focused; they possess no particular strength as long as the glass is moved about and the rays directed from one place to another; but let the glass be held perfectly still and let the rays be focused on one spot for any length of time, the effect will become immediately apparent. So with the power of thought; let power be dissipated by scattering the thought from one object to another, and no result is apparent; but focus this power through attention or concentration on any single purpose for any length of time and nothing becomes impossible. Through attention you will finally be able to overcome obstacles of any kind that appear in your path onward and upward, and the only way to acquire this wonderful power is by practice -- practice makes perfect, in this as in anything else.

97. Develop a milestone based thinking. The purpose of the milestone-based thinking is to choose the right goals and objectives and organize yourself to attain them. A flexible, milestone-based approach will help you understand, meet, and even anticipate your specific needs. Milestone-based thinking can help you organize your activities and your available resources into a logical sequence of steps or stages. It helps you understand the priorities at each stage of your project development, operations, and growth. Externally, milestone-based thinking helps you communicate to potential partners what you are attempting to do, why it is important, and how each activity contributes to the achievement of the overall goal. Milestones are like checkpoints, signaling that your goal, vision, purpose is thriving and growing. Milestones are the events that occur on the way toward achieving the desired end results. They can be short- or long-term goals and can be easily achievable or challenging. Developing milestones requires some time and effort, but it is an invaluable exercise.

98. Develop flawless relationships. The 5 most important words: I am proud of you. The 4 most important words: What is your opinion? The 3 most important words: If you please. The two most important words: Thank you. The single most important word: Congratulations. The least important word: the pronoun, I.

99. Stop being so self-conscious because absolutely nobody is paying any attention to you anyway - they are only paying attention to themselves. If you think you are beaten, you are. If you think you dare not, you don't. If you like to win but think you can't, it's almost a cinch you won't. If you think you'll lose, you're lost. Success begins with a fellow's will. It's all in the state of mind. If you think you are outclassed, you are. You've got to think high. You've got to be sure of yourself. Life's battles don't always go to the stronger or faster man. Sooner or later, the man who thrives is the man who thinks he can.

100. Focus on what you want. Each time you discuss what you don't want, you are actually giving it attention and energy.

Say and talk about what you want instead of what you don't. You can only hold one thought at a time.

Let's try this for example:

Don't think of the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

I know you just did. Your subconscious and conscious mind automatically filter out the words don't, not and no.

Here's an effective tool that will help you make eliminate discussing what you don't want.

Each time you find yourself using words such as don't, not, and no- ask yourself "so, what do I want?"

Ask yourself "So, what do I want?"

Negative statement: "Don't hesitate to call". So, what do I want?

Positive statement: "Call me soon"

Negative statement: "Don't panic". So, what do I want?

Positive statement: "stay calm"

Negative statement: "Don't be late". So, what do I want?

Positive statement: "See you on time"

Positive and negative emotions cannot occupy the mind at the same time. One or the other must dominate. Focus, talk and say what you want instead of what you don't. Ask yourself, "So, what do I want?"
